Dear Sir or Madam,

Throughout the years of my professional work, I've gained a lot of expertise in web development. I'm especially proud of becoming a Technical lead and manager from the ground up. Which was a challenge, but also part of my motivation to participate in a better world (being empathic) and strive for excellence in solutions.

As a trained solutions architect, I can seek and find the best set of frameworks and tools to achieve a goal. Moreover, as a manager, I can also delegate and monitor these responsibilities and make sure they can be a fit to a road-map plan, with business as usual kept in mind.

I believe my experience as a (web) software engineer and leadership skills can make me really empathic and realistic with timings. Furthermore, I can provide holistic solutions by not only focusing in a single area front or back, but a healthy mix of both.

I know from your post that you're seeking a senior manager (technical leader). And I think these accomplishments will put me in the picture:

- Line managed a team of 10 multidisciplinary engineers.
- My participative and motivational leadership made a team fully accountable of all the legacy system.
- Reduced cost and times of delivery substantially by implementing a better methodology.

I'd love to speak with you soon about how my solutions and architectural designs can help optimize the projects to help in the goals and challenges you're facing.

Kind and best Regards,
